

COVID-19 Transitional Protocol

Role of a Lead Worker Representative

The Government's COVID-19 Transitional Protocol encourages workplaces to have (and maintain the role of) at least one Lead Worker Representative (LWR) to help prevent the spread of COVID-19. This poster will help you to understand the role.

What is the role of a Lead Worker Representative?

- Works with their employer and COVID-19 response management team to make sure new or revised COVID-19 infection prevention and control (IPC) measures are in place.
- Communicates regularly with their employer or manager.
- Listens to their co-workers' concerns and suggestions around COVID-19 measures, and provides feedback to their employer and co-workers.
- Helps keep their co-workers up to date with the latest COVID-19 advice from Government.
- Where required, helps the COVID-19 response management team if someone develops symptoms of COVID-19 at work.
- Where required, co-operates with their employer and the Department of Public Health, if they are investigating an outbreak of COVID-19 in the workplace.

What will my employer do?

Your employer will:

- provide you with the information you need to carry out the role
- provide you with relevant training
- consult with you about the COVID-19 Response Plan for your workplace and the IPC measures in place
- consult with you about any revised measures
- keep you informed about any impact on, or changes to emergency plans or first aid
- agree a system of regular communication with you for addressing any concerns or issues.

How do I prepare for the role?

- Be familiar with the Transitional Protocol and public health recommendations.
- Participate in any training or COVID-19 briefings provided by your employer.
- Keep up to date with the latest COVID-19 advice from Government.
- Know the signs and symptoms of COVID-19.
- Understand how to stop the virus from spreading.
- Know the cleaning and disinfection requirements for preventing the spread of COVID-19.
- View the checklist, online course, and poster for LWRs at hsa.ie/covid19.
